(B) Tea Ingredients Notes:

These groups of wholesome dietary supplements can be described as a tonic or dietary supplement. Tonics are preparations that provide a mild general support for the body. They are gentle to the body system and work best when taken on a daily basis.

These groups of dietary supplements use ingredients that have traditionally been used as "adaptogens"; to help the body cope with stresses and which may have a combined tonic effect. These supplements also use green tea leaves, grape seed extract, and bee pollen. The polyphenols in these ingredients are established antioxidants, and these ingredients are expected to act in combination to provide antioxidants activity. Antioxidants are thought to provide general support for the body by diminishing the harmful effect of free radicals. Diminishing the harmful effect of free radicals is thought to be important in reducing the effects of aging. These groups of dietary supplements are designed to supplement the body's own internal mechanisms for coping with oxidative stress due to free radicals.

These dietary supplements can be taken to supplement a healthy lifestyle that includes a healthy diet including fresh fruits and vegetables, moderate exercise and plenty of rest.

*General healthful tonic (dietary supplement) for the body.

*The dietary supplements use herbs and other ingredients.

*The polyphenols in the dietary supplements are established antioxidants and have antioxidant activity.

GREEN TEA

The freshly picked leaves are heated shortly after harvest; a process that inactivates enzymes (polyphenols oxidases) that form the dark pigments associated with black tea. The heated tea leaves are then rolled to squeeze the juices to the surface of the leaf and dried using hot air. Polyphenols are a large class of mildly acidic compounds with antioxidant properties.

These statements have not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration.
This product is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent any disease.

The polyphenols in the green tea are expected to act in combination with the other ingredients in the dietary supplement to provide antioxidant support.

AMERICAN GINSENG

American ginseng is native to eastern North America and cultivated both in North America and in Asia. American Ginseng is often compared to the better known Asian ginseng. Asian ginseng is native to forests in central eastern Asia and is cultivated in Korea, Japan and northeastern China. The Chinese make a distinction between the two species of ginseng. American ginseng may act in combination with the other ingredients to provide a combined tonic effect.

GRAPE PRODUCTS

The Tannins in grape are polymers of the polyphenols catechin and epicatechin. Other names for these polymers are procyanidins, Leucoanthocyanins, procyanidolic, oligomers and oligomeric proanthocyanidins (OPC's). The strong antioxidant properties of the OPC'S have sparked interest in their use.

Directions:

First thing in the morning, take 1 capsule with 8 oz. of water before breakfast.

Follow with small breakfast in 5 minutes. Take only 1 capsule per day for the first week of the program. After the first week, if you would like additional antioxidant support, you can take 2 capsules per day with 16 oz of water, and eat less.

You may use and take your vitamins separately with the program. For coffee, tea, diet soda or soda, limit to one a day if it is possible.

More sugar, sweets or caffeine consumed will only make you "crash". It will not help with the antioxidant protection program.
